With your wages in a star? If you do, you will get two days of every week. This is exactly what Mr. Starr, of L. Starr & Company, the Winter street dry goods firm, is going to do for his employees this week.

The new Friday evening during July August the firm announced yesterday the employees will have the store open on Friday night Monday, though their salaries

Mr. Starr says the firm is doing this to return for the devotion and enthusiasm of his employees. The management declares that the unprecedented success this year has been due to the hearty cooperation of his employees.

Tale of Miss Elizabeth B. Maxwell of Milton believed that the walls and ceiling of her room were covered with water which she feared would drown her, that downers were growing in her room, and of her many other delusions were in the Supreme Court before Judge J. J. Sullivan yesterday.

An effort is being made by her sister, Mrs. Russell Allen of Kansas to break the will by this document Mrs. Allen was bequeathed only a silver sugar bowl and a pair of water canes which she delivered were hers anyway, and did not give her any of the $15,000 worth of property.

A number of very curious delusions which Miss Maxwell possessed, among the wildest of which was the belief that Miss Maxwell was a demon, because she was so beautiful, and that she was a devil, because she was so good.

There was testimony in the effect that Miss Maxwell would go up after retiring in the evening, desiring that company was coming and she would stay up till past midnight and that would come.

Dr. O. B. Pierce said that he had treated Miss Maxwell extensively and had declared that Miss Maxwell was a demon, because she was so beautiful, and that she was a devil, because she was so good.

her, and accomplished a task that no other American has ever did. In the history of racing in the world there are only two records of jockeys having ridden the winner in every race in one day. Fred Archer and George Fordham, both Englishmen, accomplished this feat in England's Monk Everson, another record, rode six winners on day at Washington Park, Chicago, in 1904, but there were never races that day and he had no mount in the seventh race.

Several American jockeys have swept the field in flat races on the big tracks, but only one has done so on an occasion. There were only six flat races, the other being a steeplechase event. The American jockey, Cleveland Fuller and Walter Miller are some of those who rode five winners in one day.

When Leo rode back to the stand after the last race his mount, Portage, established a new track record for a mile and three furlongs.

His mounts and their prices were: 5 furlongs, Portage, 9 to 1; second race, 11 to 2; fourth race, Alcom, 4 to 5; fifth race, Wild Man, 13 to 10; sixth race, Portage, 7 to 2.

A party of 31 on Leo's mounts would have paid $13,000.

"Roosevelt For Life"

The Interesting Heading in an Agricultural Paper

The editor of Brown's Farmer asks: "Why not call a special session of Congress and amend the Constitution to permit the election of a President for life?" The editor goes on to say: "Could we do better than install Theodore Roosevelt in the Presidency for life? He is without a peer for ability, without a superior for knowledge, and a patriot in every thought and aspiration. Under his wise, permanent administration the country would settle down to a career of steady prosperity."

This interesting suggestion will not surprise those that have studied the history of republics in the past. It need not surprise those that know something about human nature and its tendency to abandon an effort. The man who takes a good resolution nine times out of ten gets pretty tired of it after awhile.

The people that undertake self-control and self-government, as history teaches us, are very apt to get tired of it after awhile. The average man who starts out in business for himself drifts back into a clerkship sooner or later. Some people in America got tired long ago of the effort of self-government. To begin with, those that brought about the revolution and freed the country from the control of the English King, WERE ATTACKED AND HATED BY ALL THE SO-CALLED ARISTOCRATS AND RESPECTABLE PEOPLE OF THE DAY. All the "old families" of that time, the rich men with few exceptions, WERE IN FAVOR OF ENGLISH RULE AND DESPISED THE IDEA OF A REPUBLIC.

In our day many men—the most prosperous principally—are tired of the idea of self-government. A good, strong king would suit them better.

Time will tell what kind of a race of men this nation, with its mixture of nationalities, has produced. Time will tell whether or not this country is to go back to the monarchical form of government, and leave some better, after race to solve the problems of republican government and develop a nation of men capable of governing themselves instead of living like children under the government of one man.

We are not at present questioning Mr. Roosevelt's fitness to be President for life, or what would be the same thing, THE FIRST KING OF THE UNITED STATES. Nor do we question the fitness of his sons, carefully educated by him, to succeed him as rulers in this country. We do not question the judgment of those who declare that Mr. Roosevelt is the only one among eighty millions capable of filling the office of President satisfactorily.

The question that interests us is not one concerning Mr. Roosevelt himself, but one concerning THE AMERICAN PEOPLE.

Are THEY going to drift gradually away from the old standard, and give up the effort of the last hundred years? Will they gradually, with a third term, and a fourth term, a life Presidency, and then a hereditary rulership, repeat the old familiar story of republics on this earth?

Our own humble and unimportant opinion is that the American people are not quite ready for a monarchy yet, and that neither those living nor their children will see the abandonment of the American system of government.

But there is no denying that many men among us, some of them the ablest, look upon republican government as a joke and would gladly change for something "more stable."

Once More—BUY REAL ESTATE

This is the Time and the Chance Will Never Be Better.

We remind you again that the following statements are TRUE and important to the average citizen.

The next ten years will see the greatest increase in the value of real estate that this country has ever known.

The improvements in rapid transit are merely in their infancy. The wise man will be made prosperous by them.

A home in the suburbs is the best thing for your children and for YOU.

What you spend on city rent will BUY or build, a country home—AND YOU WILL OWN IT.

Ten miles out and fifteen miles out will soon be as near the heart of Boston as was Grove Hall ten years ago.

Bad weather has discouraged real estate dealers and they have made prices lower, as many operating on small capital are compelled to sell.

The sun is coming out again, you know. IT WILL be hot, dusty and close in town.

Get your piece of ground NOW. But get it carefully and thoughtfully. Many will lose their money—or wait a long, dreary time for profits. We are sorry that ANY should lose. But if you take the following advice YOU will make a handsome profit, and you cannot fail.

Buy only WHERE YOU CAN LIVE. Make a sacrifice if necessary—getting a little farther walking some distance—but BUY WHERE YOU CAN BUILD AND LIVE.

STUDY TRANSPORTATION. Study the elevated system and other roads. Study the maps and the direction of building. Go with the crowd—for CROWDS MEAN HIGH PRICES FOR LAND. The keenest business men are today buying real estate out of town. THEY KNOW. Buy cautiously, look carefully—but don't put it off too long. Build, get country air and REAL ESTATE PROFIT. You will be glad, in a few years, if you take this advice. BUT DON'T GO WHERE YOU CANNOT LIVE. Get your value now IN RENT, your profit later in increased value.

He is never alone that is in the company of noble thoughts.

—CONFUCIUS.

Do the Church Rich Hinder Its Work?

By Rev. Albert E. George

An Episcopal minister of Worcester has resigned from his parish because he feels the influence of the rich and the consequent destruction of the poor something is wrong.

He wants to bring about a readjustment of this difficulty. He finds the latitude and the longitude of the organization house as the church crumples his opportunity in trying to solve this irregular condition.

He becomes, in other words, a free hand out from the problem unhampered by the requirements of parochial machinery.

Is he right? Here the churchmen are somewhat handicapped in their freedom for a fair and judicious discussion of these matters.

The average person cares little or nothing for the social irregularity. He knows more or less in a circle in his church duties and avoids the real issue.

The real reformer

But the man who is constantly talking and aims to break humanity cannot judge aright out from the shoulder and naturally looks away from the organization where the real reform lies.

The churches of today are doing a grand and noteworthy work. Their interpretation of duty are more than ever faithful.

There is this reluctance, however, to handle in any definite way against the tyranny of wealth, simply because with the press has been concerned with the duty of the modern church is to operate. Occasionally they do, but when more numerous the church, the silence of the church is often pronounced and becomes a circle.

Here a clergyman, like this one, breaks away from the conventionalism which rounds him, and goes into the contest as a reformer.

Work of the Ministry

To control wealth means the sublimation of every moral reformer. To make it less of a menace to the community is the duty of a clergyman.

There is no use of condemning all wealth. Much of it is under regulation. But eternal vigilance is the price of liberty in controlling it.
